Joliet Man Killed By Train At New Lenox

Clarence Thompson, son of Mrs. Pearl Thompson of Joliet was killed early Sunday morning when he is believed to have either fallen from a moving train or was struck by a train while walking, one and one-half miles west of New Lenox on the Rock Island right-of-way.

He had gone to the George Osmus tavern in New Lenox with two girl companions. About 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning he told the two girls to drive home with his car and that he would get a ride later with friends.

He had been tending bar for Osmus and quit his job about June 15th.

Shortly after the girls left Thompson is that to have left the tavern alone. His coat was found near the New Lenox depot, lending some credence to the theory that he may have caught a ride on a freight train.

He apparently was killed sometime between 1 and 6:30 o'clock Sunday morning. His body was cut in two and the middle part of the body was not found. A passing train crew discovered the body. They notified the Will county sheriff's office and Steve Terando, local section foreman.

Besides his mother, the deceased is survived by a brother, James Thompson and 2 sisters, Mrs. Zola Ayersman and Helen Thompson, all of Joliet. His father and a brother were also killed in accidents the past year.

The body was removed to the Chamberlain & Sloan undertaking parlors in Joliet where funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The Rev. W. A. Horn, officiated and interment was made in Elmhurst cemetery, Joliet.

Mr. Harold Dickenson of Goodland, Ind., a cousin, gave the bride in marriage.

Daily Vacation Bible School Closes At Mokena

The Daily Vacation Bible school which has been conducted in Mokena for the past three weeks, under the auspicious of the St. John Evangelical church and the Methodist church, comes to a close this evening, Friday, at 8:00 o'clock in the Mokena public school auditorium.

A program will be given, to which the community is urged to attend and observe the accomplishments of the students in this school.

To defray the expenses, a free will offering will be taken. The Bible school has been a very successful undertaking this year and we hope will be held again next summer. It is a known fact that in the brief hour of Sunday school on Sundays, not enough Bible instructions can be given and therefore the Bible school in vacations to add to their knowledge in this line.

Parents should not think of the Bible school as a good place to send their children just to occupy them. Parents should back up the instructions by explaining to their children to be polite, kind and obedient while at school and both working together will be the making of splendid future citizens with high Christian ideals.

Mokena's Bible school has an enrollment of about 75 students with 20 teachers. A display of the handwork which has been made will be on exhibit, tonight at the school.

Don't forget the time and we urge everyone to attend and judge for yourself if it has been a good thing to have a Daily Vacation Bible school in our community. We think it has.

Noted Religious Leader Guest of Com. Center Foundation

Mahanam Brachmarie, who was sent over from India to represent the Hindu religion at the World Fellowship of Faiths Conference held in connection with the World's Fair, was the week end guest at the Community Center Foundation. He spoke Friday evening and Sunday afternoon and evening to a very representative group of people. He gave a very interesting picture of the life and customs of the people of India also of the Hindu religion.

He is one of a series of religious leaders who will present Sunday afternoon and evening forums at the Foundation. Each Sunday evening during the summer months there will be a vespers service. This service may be a period of fellowship in worship or there may be added a talk on some theme vital to creative living.

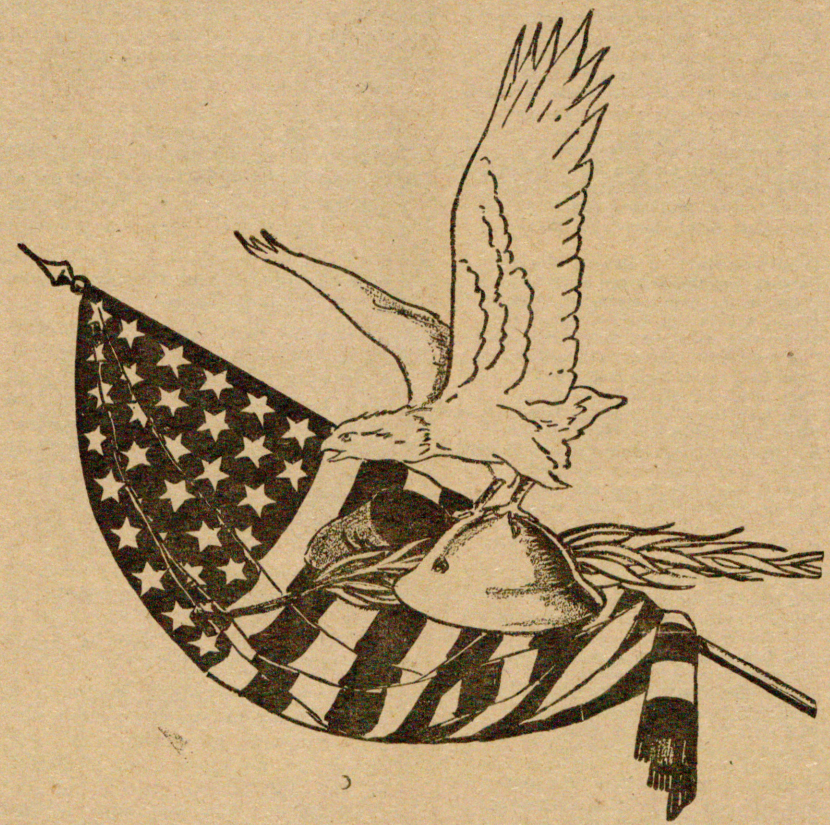

This coming Sunday June 30 at 8 p. m. we will have the privilege of hearing Dr. Emmerson O. Bradshaw head of the Chicago Council of Religious Education. It is thru him that the Daily Vacation Bible schools have been organized. He is one of the most outstanding men in his field and has much to offer. All are invited to hear him.

The first period of the Summer School Camp Project is in progress and the girls from the age group, 12 to 14, are enjoying their work and play together. If there are any girls who would like to enter the second week of this period beginning July 1, they should make application at once to Miss Rector at the Foundation.

Bumper Alfalfa And Hay Crop

The largest crop of hay and alfalfa seen in this section in years, is ready to be cut, but the continued wet weather has interfered with haying operations. Indications are for a bumper crop and oat crop. Farmers feel more encouraged with the prospects of a bumper crop.

TINLEY FLOWER SHOW SUCCESS; 400 ENTRIES

The Tinley Park School gymnasium was a beautiful fairy land last Thursday June 20th when the Tinley Park Garden Club held their seventh annual flower show.

All week long, every day, it rained, until Thursday morning when the sun shone and it's rays beamed thru the windows of the school on all those lovely flowers.

Flowers came in abundance, and the Garden Club members were all happy and gay, to know their show would be a success.

Viewing the show, as a whole, from the door-way, it's beauty was amazing and filled one with awe. The flowers and their display was wonderful in itself, but adding to all this, which increased the picture as a whole, were many booths with pastel shades of crepe paper decorations.

Peonies, daisies, roses and even a stately calla lily, stood beautiful and grand as if extending a greeting to all who entered the show portals. But each flower seemed bent on the same thing, and with each face so happy because of the sun shining, the only thing that could be lacking, if anything could, were our little feather friends. And they were doing their best on the outside. So all was perfect.

Baskets, vases, bowls and even a little wheel-barrow, contained flowers.

The judges came from Blue Island, Mokena, Forest Ridge Garden Clubs and were named: Mesdames, R. Napier and Hammond, Lowe, Balaz, Benson, Sinia and E. C. Fairbanks.

The school children had a very fine display of cut-out posters, flower posters, bird and vases of flower posters. Small boys brought bird houses and soap models.

Two little girls brought their dollies, one of which was dressed in a native Sweden costume. The Junior Garden Club had a most unusual shadow-box which was made in three divisions and contained many little places for tiny vases and soap models. This was Mrs. Wm. Funk's clever idea and she received a special award on it.

There were five tiny tea-tables. One was set for a bride, one for the fourth of July, with its pretty red, white and blue trimmings.

Then there was the ever enticing fish-pond, with a real hook and fish pole. Fish could be seen here and there in the make believe cool water. And someone left a big catch hanging in the branches of a nearby tree. Well, we had so much rain, nobody wanted the fish, so they left them hang.

And did you see those lovely strawberries? Sad to say, all I saw the next morning, was some empty saucers. Evidently, some one sampled them. "Was the sample good?"

Fay Hirsch and Lorraine La Londe were right up to date with their little doll beds containing Mamma Dionne and the quintuplets and one of the nurses standing close by, to watch over these little darlings.

This exhibit, was the first one to receive the lovely purple special award ribbon.

The garden club was very pleased to receive co-operation from the organizations and clubs and thank all very kindly for these displays.

The American Legion and the Niagara Girls' Clubs received special award ribbons. Both of these were very beautiful.

Mrs. Florence Anderson had a most interesting display of wild flowers which were mou

Bandits Riddle Squad Car With Slugs Near Tinley Park

A squad of state highway policemen and five machine-gun bandits engaged in a furious gun battle at Tinley Park Tuesday midnight.

In the running fight, which ended with the escape of the robbers' car, the police auto was riddled with bullet holes. Fourteen machine gun slugs were found in the tonneau of the car, but strangely not a member of the squad had been grazed.

Sergt. Frank Marino, squad commander, reported he had no way of determining whether the fire of his men had been in any effective.

The bandits answered descriptions given of the five machine gunners who Sunday morning invaded the Elgin club at Summit and took $300 out of three cash registers after terrorizing a house crowded with patrons.

Just before midnight the robbers appeared at Shorty's Leaping Inn, W. 141st St. and Cicero Ave., Midlothian. There Fred Reali, owner, was forced to give up $85 and several customers including a woman who left without revealing her identity, lost their money and jewelry.

Sergt. Marino and his men were notified and trailed the bandits to Jack Gibbons' tavern on W. 147th st., north of Tinley Park. The police car arrived just as the gunmen were backing out of the place after having completed a fresh robbery.

As the spotlight of the squad car was turned upon them, the bandits cut loose with their weapons and threw themselves into their own auto. The chase and continuous gun battle continued to 159th St., and Oak Park ave., where the robbers vanished.

Entertains Tinley Woman's Club At Spiderweb Party

Mrs. Wm. Semmler, assisted by her daughters Adeline and Ada entertained the Tinley Park Woman's Club in her home in Mokena Wednesday afternoon at a spiderweb party. This party was planned to have been held on the lawn, but owing to the rain that fell almost continuously that afternoon, it was necessary to change the plans and the party was held indoors.

This seemed to add to the pleasantness of the guests, instead as was feared, distract from it. Because of having to mingle more closely together each one seemed to be possessed with an extra amount of joyful spirit and although the rain fell outside it was not noticed from the inside.

To carry out the idea of a spider web party, improvised webs of string were crossed and recrossed, woven and intertwined thruout several rooms which looked like a huge (continued on last page)

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Raymer Sarver, eighty-six, pioneer Winnebago county farmer, hanged himself in his barn near Pecatonica. He was injured recently when he was kicked by a horse.

The body of John Bartman, thirty-two years old, was found lying on the right of way of the Illinois Central railroad in Harvey. Evidently he had been struck by a train.

Lewis Foshia, seventy, former banker, was injured severely in an explosion and fire at German Valley when he lighted a match in a gas plant to inspect some repairs he made.

William E. Miller, member of the Democratic central committee of Lake county for over 40 years and a former chairman of the county board of supervisors, died in Libertyville.

Harry K. Johnson, seventy-five, wealthy banker and retired Fairfield merchant, died after long illness from cancer. He was treasurer of the Skillet Fork river drainage district.

Governor Horner and other officials attended the unveiling of a memorial at Winona to the late Glen T. Axline, killed by the Leamore bank bandits while he was sheriff of Marshall county.

Three gunmen took over the Linden and Johnson grocery in Joliet, held possession for more than an hour, robbed 12 men and eight women customers one by one as they entered, and escaped with $300.

For the first time in many years the McLean county sheriff's forces have been called into action to apprehend a horse thief. Jay Cox of Ellsworth, a small town near Bloomington, reported the theft of two horses from his pasture.

Forest Olmstead, Sterling farmer, and nine of his cows were knocked down by a bolt of lightning as he was milking. A steel connecting shaft 70 feet long, from a gas engine to the mechanical milkers, was burned out at both ends.

Frank E. Owens, seventy, a bachelor, who was beginning his seventh term as mayor of Galena, died at a hospital. Mayor Owens began his political career in Galena by being elected an alderman just prior to his twenty-first birthday.

Miss Mary Italin, grade school teacher at Washington, believes her record for continuous service surpasses that of any Middle West teacher. She has taught at the same school for 59 years and has been engaged for her sixtieth year's work.

Lewis A. White, sixty-four years old, veteran newspaper man, died in the Copley hospital in Aurora. He suffered a stroke of paralysis several months ago and had since been confined to his bed. Mr. White, for the last ten years, was historical editor of the Aurora Beacon-News. He was one of the organizers of the Aurora Historical society and was awarded the distinguished service medal of the Cosmopolitan club of Aurora several years ago for his researches in Kane county annals. Surviving Mr. White are a son and a daughter.

E. J. T. Ekblaw, Chicago, is the new president of the University of Illinois Alumni association. Ekblaw is a member of the class of 1909. His election by mail ballot was announced at the annual university alumni reunion. He succeeds W. C. Ropiquet, East St. Louis attorney, who has held the office for the last two years. Mrs. T. A. Clark, Urbana, class of '91, wife of the late Thomas Arkie Clark, dean of men, was elected first vice president to succeed Philip S. Hanna, class of 1912, editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

To carry out the wishes of Governor Horner and the general assembly the Illinois Emergency Relief commission appointed a downstate administrator of relief. The job, which is officially termed state field representative, went to Earl W. Clark of Carbondale, district representative of the IERC in southern Illinois. Clark will have his salary raised from $225 to $300 a month. His primary duty, according to the plan, relates to the "problem of public relations." The commission has been criticized in downstate counties because of the "remote control" of relief there from IERC headquarters in Chicago.

Although expressing disapproval of the type of legislation, Governor Horner allowed two bills authorizing issuance of bonds by school districts to become laws without his signature. One bill, sponsored by Representative Bernice van der Vries, Winnetka Republican, authorizes school districts of less than 200,000 population to issue bonds until July 1, 1937, to pay orders for teachers' salaries and other debts of the district. The other measure, sponsored by Representative Frank Foster, Republican of Chicago, authorizes school districts of less than 150,000 population to set up a "working cash" fund to supply funds for current expenditures before taxes are collected.

Weeding out of alien families from the relief rolls has been set in motion by the Illinois emergency relief commission with the transporting of 70 alien families back to their native countries. Eighteen other families are being put into readiness for trips to the lands of their origin, it was announced. Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the commission, said he estimated the number of foreigners in Illinois supported by public funds to be near 78,000.

Albert Woods, seventy, was found dead in a well at his farm home near Benton.

LIBERTY UNDER LAW
(Temperance Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Romans 14:13-21; I Corinthians 8:3-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth.—Romans 14:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Giving Up Our Own Way.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Royal Law.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Attitude of a Good Citizen Toward Law.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Personal Liberty and Law.

A more appropriate title for this lesson would be "The Christian's Obligations in Matters of Conscience." The Scripture reference from Romans sets forth fraternal duties in matters of conscience. The background for these obligations is to be found in the fact that there were some in the Church who were very conscientious in regard to the eating of flesh. Likely, these were Christian Jews who were scrupulous in the observance of dietary laws given by Moses. Others in the Church ate what was set before them without question. There were some also who had particular regard for feast days and holy days. Others regarded every day alike. Differences and disputes arose. In dealing with this situation the apostle enumerates the following obligations:

I. Neither Party is to Sit in Judgment Upon the Other (14:1-13).

This instruction applies to things which are indifferent in themselves. The passing of judgment in such cases is wrong, because:

1. Every man is responsible to God alone (v. 4).

2. Every man must decide for himself what is right for him to do (vv. 5-7). Concerning matters indifferent in themselves, an action which may be right for one may be sinful for another.

3. Every man lives not unto himself, but unto the Lord (vv. 8, 9). The supreme purpose of Christ's death and resurrection was that he might be the Christian's Lord, both in life and death.

4. Every man must give an account to God (vv. 10-12). Every man must one day stand before the judgment seat of Christ, and render an account of himself unto God.

II. A Stumblingblock Should Not Be Placed in the Way of Another (14:13-23).

In many things the Christian has liberty so far as he personally is concerned, but that very liberty may become an occasion of stumbling to another. The following urgent reasons are given:

1. The weak brother for whom Christ died may be destroyed (v. 15). If it was worth while for Christ to die for a man, surely it is worth while that we should deny ourselves some privileges for his sake.

2. Good should not be evil spoken of (vv. 16-18). One's manner of life determines the measure of his influence over his fellow men. Such life will be characterized by:

a. Righteousness, or moral rectitude.
b. Living in peace among brethren.
c. Joy in the Holy Ghost, the usual characteristic of the saved man.

3. That which makes for peace and edification should be followed (v. 19). He who causes the weak brother to stumble through the exercise of his liberty destroys the work of God.

4. We should exercise faith in God and abstain from meats and wine which offend the weak brother (vv. 21, 22).

III. Personal Liberty to Be Abridged (1 Cor. 8:9-13).

Love is to be the governing principle of the life. Love is more important than knowledge. This love will move one

1. To abridge his liberty for the sake of the weak brother (vv. 10, 11). While the one who has proper knowledge can eat meat with impunity, if his eating would cause his weak brother to stumble he should desist from eating.

2. To exercise liberty in such case is to sin against the brethren (v. 13). Sinning against our brother for whom Christ died is to sin against Christ. The great question in all our acts should be "Will they harm our brethren?" This obligation is enforced by three important considerations.

a. The fate of the weak brother (v. 11). It may cause him to perish. Such a possible loss shows the responsibility of our actions. b. The relation of the man to his sinner (v. 11). He is his brother. c. What Christ did for the weak brother. Christ died for him. If Christ was willing to die for the man, we ought to be willing to deny ourselves our personal rights for his sake.

Purpose
The longer I live, the more deeply am I convinced that that which makes the difference between one man and another, between the weak and the powerful, the great and indigent, is energy, invincible determination, a purpose once formed and then death or victory.—Nowell Buxton.

The Right
Do the right and your ideal of it grows and perfects itself. Do the wrong, and your ideal of it breaks up and vanishes.—Martineau.

The FOURTH of JULY

By REV. B. F. CLARKSON
Chaplain G. A. R., Department of Maryland

O NATAL DAY! O Day of Glory!
Forever live in song and story!
Day that our fathers set us free,
Birthright of human liberty!
The day on which the mighty stroke
Of freedom rent the tyrant's yoke;
When patriots few, but strong of heart,
Declared themselves no more a part
Of Britain, far across the sea,
But sovereigns, and forever free,
For which they pledged their fortunes, lives,
Their honor, too, in sacrifice.
Forever shall the brave and free
Remember thee! Remember thee!

O Blessed Day! O Day of Glory!
Forever live in song and story!
When in the belfry swung the bell
Whose brazen lips were quick to tell
To waiting thousands, small and great,
The freedom of the Church and State;
That God created all men free;
That man's birthright is liberty;
That men free-born, through Him who saves
No longer should be cringing slaves
But in their might would dare withstand
The foes of freedom in our land;
Forever shall the brave and free
Remember thee! Remember thee!

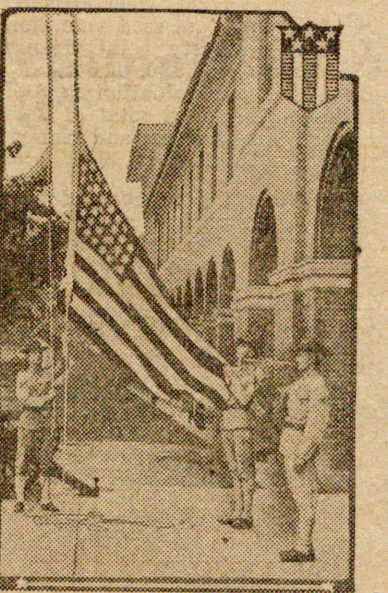

O Priceless Day! O Day of Glory!
Forever live in song and story;
The day that gave a nation birth—
The grandest nation on the earth—
When tyrants trembled on their thrones;
O'er freedom's land, o'er freedom's homes,
The flag of freedom was unfurled,
An inspiration to the world.
While tides shall flow, high stars shall burn,
Shall freemen welcome thy return
And tyrants shall sink away
As night before advancing day.

O Glorious Day! O Day of Days!
Age after age shall sound thy praise;
Forever shall the brave and free
Remember thee! Remember thee!

How the
U. S. Flag
Was Adopted

THE flag of the United States is one of the oldest in the world. It is older than Britain's "Union Jack" and the French tri-color. It was officially adopted by the Continental Congress of the United States on June 14, 1777, and has since been honored throughout the world.

The information available on the origin of the American flag, says a writer in the Washington Post, is more a matter of tradition than of history. It is an emblem born of strife, at the time when England's colonies were struggling to obtain fairer treatment and a larger measure of liberty. The aims of this struggle were not clearly defined in the beginning. The Declaration of Independence, a notable document promulgated on July 4, 1776, which has earned the admiration of many statesmen in various parts of the world, did not come until many important battles had been fought. In these, the Americans followed various colors, whose lack of uniformity bespoke the lack of clear-cut aims, of definite purposes, which for the moment prevailed, but were soon to disappear.

From this restlessness, from this turmoil emerged the United States; emerged the Declaration of Independence and the Stars and Stripes. This flag, according to tradition, had a very humble origin. It was first fashioned, we are told, by a group of Americans besieged in a fort, from the clothing of the soldiers and from material furnished by empty ammunition bags.

The flag of the United States consists of 13 horizontal alternated stripes, seven red and six white, and of a canton placed in the upper corner nearest the flagstaff in which appear on a blue field as many white stars as there are states in the Union.

One of the first places, possibly the first, over which the American flag was hoisted was Fort Stanwix. The site of this old fort is now occupied by the giant skyscrapers of New York city, which furnish an excellent symbol of the might, of the greatness of the United States.

The arms of the United States are formed by an eagle which holds in its right talons a branch of olive, in its left a bundle of 13 arrows and in its beak a golden ribbon on which is inscribed the motto of the United States—"E Pluribus Unum."

English Far in Lead
in World's Languages

How many people speak English today? It is hard to answer with any precision, but an approximation is nevertheless possible. First, let us list those to whom English is their native tongue. They run to about 112,000,000 in the continental United States, to 42,000,000 in the United Kingdom, to 6,000,000 in Canada, 6,000,000 in Australia, 3,000,000 in Ireland, 2,000,000 in South Africa and probably 3,000,000 in the remaining British colonies and the possessions of the United States.

All these figures are very conservative, but they foot up 174,000,000. Now add the people who, though born to some other language, live in English speaking communities and speak English themselves in their daily business and whose children are being brought up to it—say 13,000,000 for the United States, 1,000,000 for Canada (where English is gradually ousting French), 1,000,000 for the United Kingdom and Ireland and 2,000,000 for the rest of the world—and you have a grand total of 191,000,000.

Obviously, no other language is the everyday tongue of so many people. Russian is spoken as first choice by no more than 80,000,000 of the 150,000,000 citizens of the U. S. S. R.; the rest cling to one or another of the hundred odd lesser dialects in which the Bolsheviks are forced to print their official literature. German follows with a grand total of 85,000,000. Whether French or Spanish comes next is in doubt, but neither can show more than 55,000,000. Italian is the runner-up, and the rest of the European languages are nowhere.

Nor is there any rival to English in Asia; for, though Chinese is ostensibly the native tongue of more than 300,000,000 people, it is split into so many mutually unintelligible dialects that it must be thought of less as a language than as a group of languages.

Thus English is far ahead of any competitor. Moreover, it promises to increase its lead hereafter, for no other language is spreading so fast or into such remote areas.—H. L. Mencken in Harper's Magazine.

Bison Bones Shed Light on Earliest Americans

A spot in northern Colorado where Smithsonian Institution scientists discovered ancient animal bones is believed to be the oldest habitation site in America, says Pathfinder Magazine. The bones have been identified as those of a species of bison which are thought to have followed closely upon the receding glaciers of the last Ice age and to have inhabited the North American continent at the same time as the mysterious "Folsom men." These men made odd-looking tools known as Folsom points, which have been found scattered widely over the continent and in connection with animal bones of great age. More detailed evidence of the race, however, has never been found. Scientists are, therefore, looking hopefully to this site with the expectation that it

WHOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

Are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, grueling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars.

Kelly Peillo won the race at an average speed of 106 miles per hour. Wilbur Shaw was second, flashing across the finish line just behind the winner. Both drivers broke the track record without tire trouble. In fact, not one of the thirty-three drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. It is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

When you realize that last year 43,000 accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures, and skidding, you will understand how important it is for you to protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Volume—Direct Purchasing—Straight Line Manufacturing and Efficient and Economical System of Distributing to 500 Stores and to 30,000 Dealers, enables Firestone to give greater values at lowest prices

1 University tests show Firestone tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

Buys a "Ghost" Village and Will Restore It

ANDREW T. MORSE (right), wealthy Pennsylvanian, is so sure prosperity is coming back that he has bought the entire village of Tannerytown, N. Y., which for eight years has been "dead" because the tannery, second largest in the world, closed down and most of its buildings were razed. Mr. Morse proposes to start a business employing about 50 men, and he will reside in the mansion formerly occupied by a factory superintendent. The village, a view of which is given above, consists of 22 houses, numerous barns, 100 acres of land and an eight-acre island in Tonawanda creek. Thirty-one families remained in the place when Mr. Morse acquired it.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHAT DANNY MOUSE WAS DOING

ALL the time Nanny Meadow Mouse at home on the Green Meadows was worrying herself almost sick because Danny Meadow Mouse didn't come home, Danny himself was too busy with his own troubles to even think of Nanny. He had been trapped in a hollow log by Billy Mink and then Billy had been frightened away by Mrs. Hooty the Owl, who had then flown away to hunt for a meal in another part of the Green Forest. This had been Danny's chance to get out of that hollow log and he had made the most of it.

He had run his fastest until he just had to stop for breath and to rest a little. You know Danny's legs are short, and though he can run fast for a short distance, he cannot run far without resting. He crept under a pile of leaves to recover his breath and think what to do next. It is hard work to think when you are out of breath. Danny found it so. When at last he had stopped panting he began to consider what to do next. Never had he been in that part of the Green Forest. He didn't know a single hiding place. This gave Danny a most uncomfortable feeling.

"I will have to trust to luck," thought Danny. "Yes, sir, I will have to trust to luck. There isn't anything else I can do."

Just then he heard heavy, shuffling footsteps. Now, who was coming? Danny's heart began to go pit-a-pat, as he peeped out from under the leaves. What he saw made his bright little eyes almost pop out of his head and his head and his heart almost stopped beating. Shuffling along straight toward him was a huge black form. Never in his life had Danny felt quite so stopped and raked over some leaves with his great paws, at the same time sniffing among them with his nose. Every sniff sent a shiver over Danny. Buster picked up something and ate it. What it was Danny didn't know, but he did know that if Buster should find a certain little Meadow Mouse under the leaves he would treat it in just the same way.

Danny wanted to run. Never in all his life had Danny wanted to run as he did right that minute. But there was nowhere to run to. He didn't know of a single hiding place. Buster Bear hadn't found him yet and didn't know that he was anywhere about. If he should run, Buster would be likely to see or hear him, while, if he sat still, Buster might not rake over that pile of leaves. So Danny sat still.

little and helpless. He knew who it was. There was no mistaking that great black fellow. It was Buster Bear.

What to do Danny didn't know, so he did nothing. He simply crouched right where he was under that little pile of leaves and wished that he could shrink into nothing at all. Yes, sir, that is what Danny wished. Buster

QUESTION BOX
by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Last night about midnight my husband returned home so terribly intoxicated I had to put him to bed. This morning he said he was to a party and admitted he had been drinking but claims he had only one glass. Do you believe that?

Yours truly,

MRS. AULTHEFUN.

Answer: Certainly I believe he only had one glass, but ask him how many times it was filled.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have been studying economics, and of course the prices of the different commodities occupy most of my attention. In a discussion last Sunday I took the stand that every known commodity has gone up in price during the past ten years. Am I right?

Sincerely,

LILLY BOQUET.

Answer: You are not right. Everything has gone up but writing paper; that will always remain stationary.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read in a newspaper some time ago about four Scotchmen who each put 25 cents in a pot as a wager. The bet was to see which of the four men could stay under water the longest and the one who did was to win the money. I have been unable to find out which Scotchman won the money. Can you tell me the result of that wager?

Yours truly,

SANDY COMPLEXION.

Answer: They all drowned.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I go with some boys, and we are all around twelve years old. The other day we found a full pack of cigarettes, and we all smoked. While we were smoking, a minister came over to us and asked us if we knew where little boys who smoked cigarettes go to, and we all said no. He said he was a minister, so could not tell us, but he said, if we wrote to you that you would know. Will you please tell us where little boys go when they smoke?

Sincerely,

I. N. HALE.

Answer: When little boys smoke, they go up an alley.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My wife is a good cook but she can't make pies, and I love pies. What can she do to learn to make good pie?

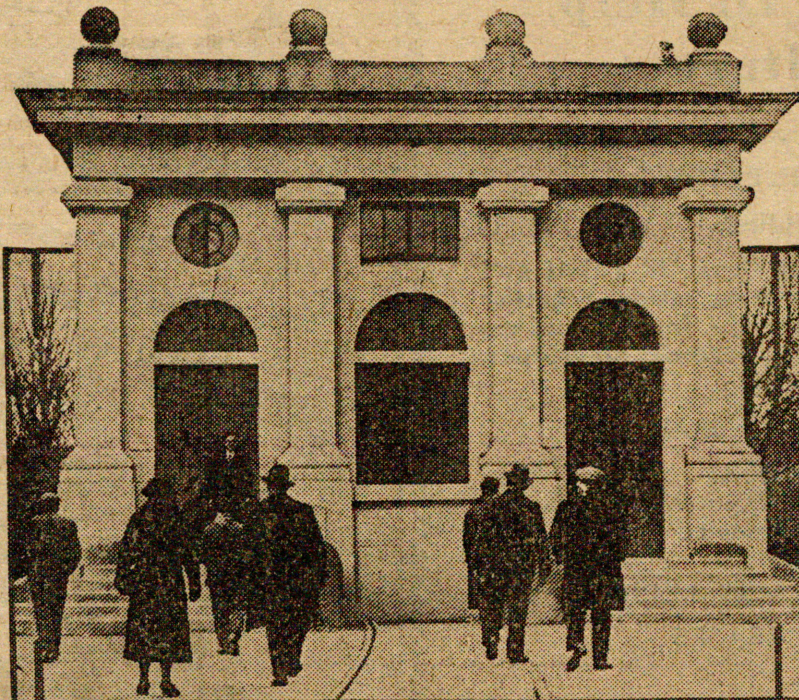

Sincerely,

LEM N. CUSTARD.

Answer: Have her go to some school and take up a course in "Pyrography."

THE NUTRITIOUS BANANA

GOVERNMENT experts tell us that the banana is one of the most nutritious of our fruits, and is one of the most easily digested. Pound for pound it is more nutritious than the potato and it constitutes the chief carbohydrate food of millions of people in the tropics, where it takes the place of cereals and tubers, such as potatoes.

The banana has still another quality which highly recommends it. The thick skin which covers the fruit protects it against all contamination and makes it a most sanitary fruit.

The ripe banana is easily digested. It is important that all fruit should be well ripened before eating. The skin of the fruit should be a deep yellow with flecks of brown covering it. A firm fruit in a dark brown skin is thoroughly ripe and at its best.

Banana Pie.

Bake a rich, tender pastry shell and fill it with thinly sliced bananas sprinkled with salt, lemon and sugar to taste. Pour over a cupful of whipped cream flavored with almond and sweetened to taste.

Banana With Beefsteak.

Slice into halves under-ripe bananas and lay in a granite dish with butter, lemon juice and sugar with a sprinkling of salt. Bake until the bananas are soft, then serve as a garnish to the steak platter, serving a juicy porthouse.

Banana Fluff.

Take a cupful of sliced ripe banana, add a little lemon juice and half cupful of sugar, add an unbeaten egg white and whip until firm. Serve in sherbet glasses with a little lemon syrup poured over it and top with whipped cream.

Banana Fritters.

As an entree a banana fritter is especially appetizing. It may be served with various meats or as a dessert. Cut the bananas into thirds or smaller, if desired, dip them into the fritter batter and fry in deep fat. Serve hot or cold with a lemon sauce, using the juice and rind of lemon with a bit of cornstarch for thickening and sugar to cook a rather light syrup.

SEEK TO TRACE
RED INDIANS TO
RUSSIAN TRIBES

Likenesses between the former Indian sign language of North America and an ancient sign language still understood by tribes in remote valleys of the Caucasus mountains, in Russia, have been discovered by Prof. N. J. Marr, of the Russian Institute of Anthropology at Moscow, who believes that these may be clues to the Asiatic homeland from which ancestors of the American Indians are believed to have migrated, says the Baltimore Sun.

When North America first was explored by the white men the various tribes of Indians spoke many different languages. One Indian ordinarily could not understand Indians of other tribes, any more than persons speaking different modern languages can understand each other.

Almost all the Indians understood, however, a kind of universal sign language consisting of a series of standard gestures not unlike the sign language used by persons who are deaf and dumb.

Many early pioneers and army officers who came in close contact with the Indians also learned this sign language and used it in dealing with the Indian chiefs. Full accounts of it are preserved in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, although there now are very few Indians who can use it.

Recently Professor Marr arranged with Archibald Phinney, an American Indian now studying in Moscow, to compare the former sign language of North America with those still used in the Caucasus. Most anthropologists believe that the ancestors of the American Indians came originally from somewhere in Asia, possibly from this very Caucasus region.

Farm Debt Is

Serious Problem

The problem of farm debt adjustment is one of the most serious problems confronting our country today. The recent ruling of our Supreme Court in declaring the Frazier Lumber Act unconstitutional is perhaps going to make adjustments more difficult. However, Section 75 of the Bankruptcy Act as amended on June 7, 1934, was not affected by this ruling and any distressed farmer may still file before the Conciliation Commissioner of his county asking for a composition and an adjustment of his indebtedness.

Also, a FARM DEBT ADJUSTMENT COMMITTEE has been appointed for this county which is available for assistance to worthy distressed farmers. This committee has made several settlements in Will county and debtors and creditors alike have expressed their appreciation of the fine services of this committee.

These men serve without pay, their only desire being to aid deserving distressed farmers and their creditors. Many times a careful review of a case by a county committee results in a workable agreement for an adjustment of the debt, as the experience of the committee frequently enables them to suggest types of settlements that have not occurred to either the debtor or his creditors.

Any farmer who is in danger of losing his farm can feel free to call on any member of the committee for assistance. Members of the Will county committee are:

H. P. Dwyer, 609 Marion St., Joliet, chairman; Fred Wilhelm, R. 3, Joliet, secretary; Arthur States, Elwood, Ill.; M. J. Breen, Elwood, Ill.; Joe Kohl, Mokena, Ill. and H. J. Schroeder, Peotone, Ill.

BRINGING GOD TO RUSSIA

Moscow, U. S. S. R.—Ernest Elmer Baker, of Menard, Texas, felt called to bring religion back to the godless Soviet. With $1.40 he left his mother, wife and 15-year-old son and beat his way to New York. He shipped as a seaman to Rotterdam, jumped ship, walked 700 miles across Germany and Poland, and finally crossed the frontier to Russia without a passport. Last week, August Ward, secretary of the American Embassy at Moscow found Baker in the Minsk detention camp. When asked if he would like to know anything of the outside world, Baker queried: "What has happened to Dillingham?" The Embassy hopes to raise the $100 necessary for his return transportation from his family or friends.

MECHANICAL HEART-BEATS

New York City—For years the press had always been quick to report unfounded rumors of the artificial "creation of life." Almost as good newspaper copy is the creation of an artificial heart and lungs to sustain life in a severed head. But last week the latter dream almost came true. In Science Magazine, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Dr. Alexis Carrel described a mechanical "heart-lung" for the culture of whole organs isolated from the body. The Lindbergh-Carrel device has kept animal hearts, ovaries, kidneys, spleens and other organs alive and functioning for indefinite periods. Since 1928, Col. Lindbergh has spent more and more time working with New York's Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, where he has made several important contributions to science. Dr. Carrel recently told a Paris Audience that the flier had "become my best assistant." The new apparatus will allow scientists actually to watch organs work for the first time. It may also facilitate the production of good, cheap gland extracts now almost prohibitively expensive.

Signaling by Drums

In South Africa messages are signaled by means of drums made of bark, the tappings on which can be heard many miles away. It is by this method that the defeat of Sir Redvers Buller at Colenso was made known to natives 60 miles distant in the space of two hours.

White with Purple Trim in this booth, home-made candies were sold by Mrs. Forrest Rice.

The I. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co. had their setting on the stage it was azure blue and burnt orange trim, very lovely with trellises, lawn seats and benches to represent a garden. One of these trellises was donated for a prize for the most points scored on flower-show entries and Mrs. Wm. Funk was the lucky person.

Mr. J. C. Funk had a pretty blue and apricot color trim for his booth and displayed canned goods.

Mr. Henry Vogt had a display of canned goods etc., in a pretty pink and orchid booth. Mr. Vogt also donated gifts to the fish pond.

Mr. Henry Bettenhausen had his corner in blue with black trimming, and had one of the new streamline Westinghouse refrigerators on display. A radio was also provided. Mr. Bettenhausen had a very beautiful display of flowers from Vaughns' arranged by Mr. Albert Erickson.

Mr. Erickson said he came to Tinley and brought the display from Vaughns' to our first flower-show. So you see we are old friends, that's seven years ago.

Mr. Bettenhausen also helped us very much by making the hand bills which were placed in the Sunday papers to advertise our show. Mr. Millard Klepper assisted in distributing these for the club.

The Fire Department helped by donating candy and gifts for the fish pond.

The Tinley Park Dairy donated chocolate milk and orange drink. The Dairy also had a table with a display of their products. These were also donated and sold later. A

A big surprise was a lovely large cake trimmed in pink and white with the name Tinley Park Garden club donated by the Tinley Park Bakery and a display of bread, pies, rolls and cookies which covered two tables. Chances were sold on this lovely cake, and Gene Anderson was the lucky winner. Did you have enough cake Gene? The rolls, bread, etc., was later auctioned by Mr. Bert Fulton for the Garden Club.

Hick and Mesenbrink donated a ham and the Brandon family was made happy because "Vernon" was a lucky young boy was the winner.

The Tinley Park Catholic church made a donation of a dozen lovely gifts that were also sold. These were designed of tin and gayly colored.

Mr. Robert Carmichel had a lovely display of photos, some of these were prize winners. The judges also honored him with a special award and wished him very much success for the future.

We also want to thank Mr. Rick for the use of the beaver boards used in our show.

When the judges finished their duties of awarding blue, red, white and yellow ribbons, they were invited into our little tea-room. Here were tables with gayly covered little cloths and each table had a lovely vase of flowers. On the tables were boxes beautifully trimmed with flowers and green crepe paper with this little verse in a tiny booklet on the cover.

This dainty lunch was packed for you,
With a happy feeling of friendship true
To be a judge is not much fun,
We thank you kindly for what you have done.

Then oh! our eyes did beam when the box was opened, the goodies we found there was potato salad, sandwiches, pickle and deviled egg all wrapped so daintily in waxpaper and trimmed in pink and green. Cake, ice-cream and coffee completed this dainty luncheon. At each place was a little pink and green trimmed cup with pink and green mints, a spray of lilies of the valley was the decorations.

Mrs. Klepper and the flower show chairman also enjoyed this delightful luncheon. The judges were so pleased and expressed themselves greatly in that respect. All the boxes disappeared because the judges took these for souvenirs. Mrs. Goebel and Mrs. Duff served at the luncheon. We owe our thanks to Mrs. Swisher and her committee for this lovely treat.

Mrs. Frank Baldwin had the following program for the evening:

Mr. Frank Balthis of the Garfield Park Conservatory assisted by Mr. Moore, showed slides of flowers, gardens and plants for the first half hour and everyone enjoyed these very much. Betty Brunner and Genevieve Kososki played a piano solo. The Jr. Garden club sang a "flower song", little Beverly Berg and Ellen Werth dressed as little posies helped to add beauty to the song. Mrs. Alice Anderson accompanied on the piano. Fay Hirsch and Lorraine LaLonde sang, "Are we pleasing you", and danced to this tune. They were accompanied on the piano by Helene Rice.

The Pakorni Brothers entertained with songs and music.

Mrs. Duff was in charge of our refreshment room where home made cake and ice-cream was sold. She was assisted by the Misses Helene Rice, Fern Fulton, Shirley Anderson, Lois Klepper and Mildred Nielsen.

The big event of the show took place at 10 p. m. when the beautiful Pansy quilt made by Mrs. Marquardt and members of the club was awarded to Mr. Edwin Hug.

A pair of lovely pillow cases was awarded to Mrs. James Harcourt. They were donated by Mrs. Wm. Funk.

"I would call that the end of a Perfect Day".

We Must Work Together

EVERY thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks — more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our town to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers — the stores and banks of our town — and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

By Bernice T. Van der Vries
Representative Seventh District

The final week of the Fifty-ninth Session of the General Assembly will open with a calendar jammed with hundreds of bills many of them very controversial in character. The Senate with its membership two-thirds smaller than the House can push through many bills in a day but the House with its membership of 153 and with the two parties more evenly divided becomes entangled in debates that consume time in many cases out of proportion to the importance of the bill.

Some of the important measures yet to be settled are Motor Drivers Licenses (almost unanimously opposed by down state representatives), Insurance Code (House must concur or defeat amendments added by the Senate), Appropriations of $5,000,000 for Old Age Pensions (the pension bill which was passed contained no provision for payment), and most controversial of all the bill extending the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission until March 1, 1937. A companion measure to the latter is the Appropriation Bill for $45,000,000 for Relief for administering the provisions of the Relief Act. These are only a few of the important questions which will be up for discussion.

The past week was a hectic one. In the House the Speaker was besieged by members wishing to have their bills called. On Friday soon before recessing, all bills in Committees were tabled and a large number of bills on second reading were given the same treatment. Only those having a chance for passage and appropriation bills were advanced. Fallen by the wayside were the bills giving women the right to serve on juries in Illinois. The violent opposition of the Speaker and the Minority Leader blocked these measures.

The Chicago Home Rule Bill which had been amended to apply only to transportation systems was passed under the watchful eyes of Mayor Kelly on the Speaker's rostrum. Under his guidance, the Senate on the same day had passed the handbook bill for Chicago. Pressure is being placed on the Governor to secure a veto of the bill to legalize gambling.

School interests were temporarily cheered Thursday when the amount specified in the Appropriation Bill for the State School Distributive Fund was by amendment increased by $5,000,000 thus making the total $15,500,000. The next day the amendment was reconsidered and defeated. The schools were asking for $30,000,000. The defeat of the amendment was a bitter blow as there seems no chance of passing the bills providing for the payment of the arrearage in the Distributive Fund with the administration opposition as has been evidenced by their failure for many weeks to advance the bills. Many schools in the Seventh District may be unable to open their doors in September. The only hope lies in the Governor.

A compromise bill on the Chicago Teachers Pension was introduced on Friday. It is understood that the Governor insisted on this after hearing both sides of the case and that he realized that the bills passed had been too drastic.

Tuesday, the representatives of more than fifty organizations which represented thousands of citizens in Metropolitan Chicago appeared before the Municipalities Committees of the House to protect against the so-called Park Grab or Coney Island in Burnham Park measures which are sponsored by the Chicago City Administration. I am sure that the noble souls who tried to present their opposition to the bills (S. B. 313 and 314) wished for sound pictures of the hearing. Every speaker was submitted to rude questioning by some member of the Committee as to their place of residence, occupation etc. It appeared to be the sentiments of some members of the legislature that only those living in the South Park District had any right to be heard. The vote in favor of reporting the bills out was 16 to 9 and the amendment providing for a referendum introduced by Representative Van der Vries was laid on the table by the same vote.

If more citizens visited the Assembly and particularly the committee hearings there would probably be more interest displayed in elections for the Assembly.

Wants Hughes

To Run for Gov.

The following significant letter has been sent by Charles Sylvester, Mokena, to Secretary of State Hughes, urging him to run for governor.

Mr. Hughes:

I am writing this to you for the reason that I believe you to be the true friend of the aged and also a true Democrat and supporter of the Democratic platform of 1932. There must be a big change in the leadership of our party next year. I am speaking plain, Hank Horner stands no more chance than a celluloid cat chased by an asbestos dog in Hades. The voters are against him and his taxes.

I heard him say in Joliet "If I am elected there will be no increase in taxes" and there has been nothing but taxes.

The people of the state have the greatest confidence in you. I feel with you at the head of the ticket, we have good chance of electing a Democratic Governor. We old people are in need of the one dollar a day pension. Dick Barr and Tom Courtney stole the six dollar bill of two years ago. Don't let Dick steal this one. With the best of wishes for your future success,

I am yours respectfully,
CHARLES SYLVESTER,
Mokena, Ill.

Important Bills

Get Action In General Assembly

Favorable action on the secondary road bills by the House road and bridge committee, passage by the Senate of a two-year moratorium on mortgage indebtedness and favorable consideration by the House Judiciary Committee of a proposed revenue amendment to the Illinois constitution were the chief developments of interest to agriculture last week in the General Assembly, reports the Illinois Agricultural Association. The session will close July 1st.

The road bills sponsored by Senators Lehmann and Lantz and Representatives Sinnott and Hunter passed the Senate by a vote of 39 to 0 several weeks ago. They are designed to bring about an equitable distribution among the counties and a maximum mileage of graveled secondary roads from Illinois allotment of federal work relief funds thru the use of men now on the relief rolls.

The main bill, S. B. 371, provides that unless otherwise required by federal regulations not less than 50 per cent of all sums apportioned to Illinois for roads and streets shall be used for the construction and improvement of secondary roads. The money would be apportioned among the counties, one-half in proportion to their total mileage of unimproved roads. It fixes the maximum requirements of designs for roads and authorizes counties, township, and road districts to contract for maintenance of roads constructed from road relief funds.

In speaking for the bills before the House Committee, Paul E. Mathias pointed out that the IAA supported the $60,000,000 and the $100,000,000 bond issues, the state gas tax and motor license fees, all of which have resulted in a splendid paved road system connecting up most of the cities in the state. He further asserted that Illinois farmers had been promised that when the primary system of paved roads was completed, secondary farm-to-market roads would be improved out of gas tax and motor license fee revenues. Approximately 70 to 80 per cent of the farmers of the state still reside on unimproved roads, he said, although they have been paying gas taxes and motor license fees thruout the years.

Mokena Aces

ACES LINEUP
By Williams

St. Michael's of Shreveville, Indiana tromped over the Aces Sunday, beating them 3 to 0. The game was close and was scoreless till the 7th inning. Marti started off the first inning with a hit and was caught off first for the first out. George Lauffer took the pole for the count with Bill right on his heels.

H. Miller started off swinging. Ed Miller was played out by McGovney to Muehler. Novak grounded out to Wes. Cappel held the boys down till the fourth when they got 3 hits in the 6th and 2 in the seventh. Mokena started off with 1 on the first, third, seventh and eighth and one more in the ninth. They had men on but they couldn't score. The diamond was in very bad condition. When they finished fixing it up it looked like the sand dunes. Well so much for the loss.

Next Sunday June 30th Mokena plays Symerton at Mokena in Hayden's field.

CHARMING LITTLE RUNABOUT FROCK

PATTERN 9333

The whole fabric world echoes with the words "Shantung," "Linen," "Pique." The whole fashion world reflects "femininity" in its styling, even when the styling is decidedly tailored! So take a cue, and combine the two! For the casual little runabout frocks you need so many of, Pattern 9333 is the Right Answer. Charming in its simplicity, the yoke becomes a slashed excuse for a sleeve and a note of femininity is reflected in the simple bodice by means of front and back tucks. The clever detail of belt and pocket subtly conforms with the yoke styling. Choose novel crystal, wood or cork buttons.

Pattern 9333 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric. SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coin preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included. Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

GOLDEN DAWN

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, "Penelope," in an effort to solve his marital troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. At a baseball game a ball strikes ten-year-old Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for her when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Nance escapes, although shot, and goes to Lanny's apartment. From one of the men in the boat on which the girl escaped McNamara learns that Nance's real name is Penelope Gatlin. He also discovers that she is heiress to $750,000. Fearful of McNamara, in his official capacity, Nance flees. Lanny finds her in her apartment, asleep. Then she disappears, and McNamara learns that she is living in Paris. He also discovers he is in love with Lanny.

"The instructions are fine, but why commit forgery by signing Dan's name? If the original is traced—"

"I have signed it Mac, and the world is filled with Macs. When Dan has reached his office, telephone him and tell him to do something that will prove in any court he was in his office when I filed this cablegram."

Lanny relented. "You might make a detective, at that."

Twenty minutes later Dan McNamara was listening to Lanny reading Stephen's cablegram over his private line. "Excellent," was his sole comment, "but print it in block letters. Even a typewriter can betray one. When Steve files this telegram have him pay for it with a hundred-dollar bill, and have him wear large black goggles and the rim of his hat pulled down all the way round. The girl who receives it will think one crook is cabling another. If she's ever asked what sort of man filed it, her description of the sender, plus my own perfect alibi, will put me in the clear."

"How are we to manage after she has eluded the Paris police?"

McNamara sighed gustily. "Flynn will be in touch with her bank, and every time she cashes a draft on her letter of credit, Flynn will have a line on her address."

"You're no help," Lanny snapped, and hung up. Half an hour later, from the cable company's main office, Stephen dispatched the cablegram.

With Dan McNamara definitely out of the fight, Stephen felt lonely and apprehensive. He wondered why the girl had fled to Paris in the face of Dan McNamara's instructions to flee to Lower California, to enter which no passport is required. He asked Lanny. "Oh, that's no mystery, Stevie. I brought home from the office, intending to show it to Dan, an article by a celebrated plastic surgeon of Paris. Penelope read it with great interest. She went to Paris to consult this French plastic surgeon and also to have samples of her new nose drawn by a competent artist."

"So that's how the Paris police informed Dan she was having her portrait done by an American artist, eh? I suppose it will be her luck to be in a hospital undergoing the operation when the Paris police receive word to deport her."

"I'm afraid she's balled everything up, Stephen. Flynn will have the number of her passport and Dan will have no time to fix a new passport photograph on to it. They'll not trust to the photo to identify her if she tries to land. They'll check up on the passport number also."

"Will you never cease discussing this miserable business, Lanny?" Stephen burst out irritably. "If it hadn't been for you we wouldn't be in this wretched predicament."

When the captain of detectives called in Detective Sergeant P. Flynn and related to him the tale told to him by Mrs. Rudolph Merton, Flynn gave no sign of being particularly interested. Carefully and methodically he arranged in his mind the facts as stated, and when he left the presence of his superior, all he knew was that he was to strive to recover a lost heiress by name Penelope Gatlin, and that she had a nose that should make her recognizable anywhere.

After nine hours of refreshing slumber, Flynn proceeded to ponder the case of Penelope Gatlin of the saddle nose. "I seem to be getting my fill of girls with saddle noses who disappear mysteriously," he decided lazily—and instantly something clicked in his brain and he knew he was on the trail of Nance Belden again. An heiress, eh? McNamara had hinted at powerful influences back of Nance Belden, and she certainly must have hired the expert help she had had in her escape from San Quentin penitentiary.

"McNamara knows who she is," Flynn decided. "He's getting his—in chunks—for helping her. I'll bet it's the same girl."

He decided not to take Angellotti into his confidence. For two hundred and fifty dollars, Angellotti had agreed to abandon his interest in Nance Belden; whereas P. Flynn had scorned to quit. He would pick up the trail again alone, and when he had Nance Belden or Penelope Gatlin on his hook—well, she had to pay somebody to keep out of San Quentin, and that somebody should be P. Flynn.

He went to San Jose that day and interviewed the officials of the bank, who, when he flashed his shield, gave him all the information they possessed. Dan McNamara had artfully destroyed all the girl's police photographs, but if she had secured a passport, Flynn argued to himself, she had left two of her passport photographs with the passport office, and Flynn knew he could borrow one of them.

Flynn's shield was an open sesame to the man in charge of the passport office. Two minutes after his arrival he knew Nance Belden had secured a passport.

Employing identically the same means McNamara had employed, he traced Penelope Gatlin to Paris within three days. But he had now to prove that Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden were one and the same person, so he interviewed the United States marshal, who secured for him one of the girl's passport photographs. Armed with this, Flynn crossed the bay to San Quentin.

"Is that Nance Belden?" he asked the matron.

"That is Nance Belden," was the reply.

From the ferry he went at once to the home of Mrs. Rudolph Merton. He stuck the photograph under her nose and asked gruffly: "Is that Penelope Gatlin?"

A tremor ran over Mrs. Merton's face. It seemed to Flynn that she was frightened, disturbed.

"Well?" he demanded. "You can't expect the police to find your missing daughter if you don't help. Is this her picture or isn't it?"

"I—I don't know. I have never heard of her before."

"Never heard of her! Why, she's your daughter!"

"I haven't any daughter."

"Why, you called on the captain of detectives and asked him to find your daughter. What do you mean by telling me you've never heard of her?"

"I can't remember. I don't know. Oh, please, please don't ask me! Something terrible will happen. I—I—"

"You refuse to identify this photo as that of Penelope Gatlin?" Flynn was growing irritated.

Finally she had hysterics and a maid came in and asked P. Flynn to leave the house.

Flynn was profoundly irritated. He knew Penelope Gatlin was at 27 Rue Instantly Something Clicked in His Brain and He Knew He Was on the Trail of Nance Belden Again.

St. Honore, Paris, but he did not know that Nance Belden was! Back at central office, he compared the passport photograph with the substitute photograph Dan McNamara had pasted on Nance Belden's fake police record card—and knew it for a fake.

Suddenly it occurred to Flynn that he had had an official interview with everybody connected with this mysterious case, except Dr. Stephen Burt.

"You're a long time getting around to see me, Sergeant," Stephen charged, and indicated a large, comfortable armchair.

"I called on you once, Doctor, but you didn't know it. That was the night after Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin. Me an' my partner trailed you to the chief's house."

"I've always thought you and the excellent Angellotti didn't make the best of your opportunities," Stephen murmured. "Still, I suppose you were playing with dynamite."

"We were," said Flynn, "but no more. The chief's one of the biggest-hearted men in the world, but a picnic egg if you rub him the wrong way. So we pussy-footed."

"No fair man could deny the excellence of your pussy-footing. I know all about it. How about a wee Dock an' Doris?" Stephen suggested.

"There's an idea for you, Doctor."

Stephen summoned the butler and ordered the drink. Flynn, with great deliberation, produced Penelope's photograph.

"Do you know the lady?" he queried.

"I think I do, Sergeant."

"Who is she?"

"Is there any reason why I should express an opinion?"

"Not unless you choose to be good-natured. I suppose you know you're in Dutch for aiding and abetting an escaped convict."

"Well?"

"Naturally we don't want to make the going hard for a man of your standing," Flynn continued.

"My dear sergeant, you would have started the fireworks long ago if you had anything tangible to proceed upon."

Flynn sipped his highball. "You're being well paid for shielding this girl, of course. I don't blame you a bit, but—you're too big a figure in your profession to get into trouble with the police."

"Dan McNamara is my friend."

"Well, Mac is out of it. He can't protect you because he must protect himself. It might interest you to know that Nance Belden and a lost heiress, Penelope Gatlin, are the same person, and I have the Paris police watching her right now."

"Are you quite certain the girl is still at that Paris address?" asked Stephen.

"I know it."

"I know she isn't—and the Paris police do not know where she is."

"Do you?"

"No, but if I did I wouldn't tell you."

"Look here," said Flynn. "What's it worth to your young girl friend to have me lay off the case?"

"I'll give you twenty dollars in Confederate currency. You were offered real money once and refused it."

They looked at each other searchingly, then both laughed. "I see there ain't much use pumpin' you, Doc," Flynn admitted. "Well, a fellow can't be ruled off for trying."

"When were you to see a doctor last?"

"At the age of twenty-two. Why?"

"How old are you?"

"Forty-two."

"Well, just to prove I'm friendly I'll give you a quick physical examination. It may save you a fee later from some other physician. Mind if I give you a quick look-see?"

"Go to it," said Flynn.

Stephen tested Flynn's heart action and lungs and took his blood pressure.

"You're up thirty-six points," he told him.

Flynn was distinctly perturbed.

"What does that mean?"

"It means that you have a fairly well developed case of hardening of the arteries. If you were to be re-examined physically, for promotion, you might be retired on pension."

"I couldn't afford that," cried Flynn.

"I've got a wife and five children."

"Nevertheless, I would suggest you apply for a six months' leave of absence and have me treat you. How's your eyesight?"

"Grand," P. Flynn mumbled.

"I doubt it, Sergeant. I'll bet you a hundred dollars you cannot look into this little mirror fifteen minutes without averting your gaze. Want to earn the hundred?"

"I can't afford that much of a bet, Doc."

"Well, then, we'll not bet, but if you can I'll give you a hundred dollars."

Stephen produced a hand mirror and held it two feet in front of Flynn and about six inches above the level of his glance. He took out his watch.

"Go!" he said. "And remember I'm watching you. If you get through this test successfully there's hope for your arteriosclerosis."

P. Flynn grinned and gazed. In three minutes the effort oppressed him. Stephen's soft hands stroked the detective's brow. "Why did you call to see me?"

"To get you to identify the photograph," Flynn's voice was faint.

"Why was that necessary?"

Flynn hesitated, struggled a little, but lay back quietly again as Stephen's facile hands resumed their light massaging. "Are you going to oppose me, Sergeant?"

"No, Doctor."

"Will you answer questions truthfully?"

"Yes, Doctor." The tones were dead and lifeless, for Flynn slept a hypnotic sleep.

"Why was it necessary that I should identify the photograph?"

"I've got to know before I act, Doctor. The matron at San Quentin says it's Nance Belden, but the photograph is on the passport of Penelope Gatlin."

"Why do you want this girl?"

"She's made a fool out of me—and she can pay well to be let alone."

"You're not interested in seeing her returned to prison?"

"Not a d—n bit, Doctor. Why should I?"

"That name, Penelope Gatlin, is bad luck," Stephen warned. "Never repeat it to a human soul. If you do it may mean your death. And your oldest child will be kidnapped, tortured and killed."

"Oh, God, no!" Flynn cried out in agony.

"You must forget Penelope Gatlin and Nance Belden. Will you?"

"Yes, Doctor."

Tipsy Fruit

Soon, if scientists have their way, all freshly gathered apples, not wanted for immediate consumption, will be gently inebriated. This odd development follows on recent experiments of the food investigation board to eliminate the wastage of fruit. Apples in a sound, healthy condition, it was found, absorb alcohol readily. Ordinarily, their natural concentration of alcohol increases with old age. A large artificial dose stimulated their respiratory "organs," while a small dose produced the opposite effect.

As a result, apples, preserved in a semi-coma, a state of mild drunkenness, in which their rate of breathing is slowed down to its absolute minimum, will retain their hardness and choice flavor for months.—London Tit-Bits.

Woman's Club At Spiderweb Party

spiderweb and a delighted exclamation filled the air when the hostess announced that it was the duty of the guests to untangle and take down the spiderweb. Much fun was had in doing this, and when the end of the web was at last found by each guest, a spider made of gum drops with rather large red legs was found and with it went the guarantee that it would not bite. Several games were played and in these Mrs. Forest Rice and Mrs. Elmer Chapman won the prizes for being the most skillful. Much merriment also was had in the singing of a lisp song.

In the dining room the table was covered with a beautiful drawn work linen cloth centered with a flat bouquet of crimson red roses surrounded with four crystal candle holders with two green and two yellow candles. A luncheon of coffee, wafers, ice cream, candy and nuts was served buffet fashion from this table with Mrs. L. G. Bruder and Mrs. Robert Bechstein, pouring. The ice cream was served in the smallest sized flower pots lined with wax paper and a small candy sucker representing a flower was in the center of each flower pot. Mrs. Omar Ebenhack, president of the club, announced a farewell luncheon will be given by Mrs. W. B. Combs at the Midlothian Country Club on Monday, July 1st following which a musical will be given in the home of Mrs. J. F. Kruzeka just west of the club house in the beautiful residential district.

Those intending to go are to notify Mrs. Frank Baldwin dean of the club.

It was decided at this time that the Tinley Park Woman's Club will hold a number of silver teas during the summer to raise money for the club's winter expenses. Those present were:

Mesdames Omar Ebenhack, R. Hug H. Wyman, J. C. Funk, Wm. Funk, Wm. Stockman, R. Bagby, Charles Crist, Elmer Chapman, Henry Boldt, Frank Baldwin, Irvin Stover, Forrest Rice, Walter Bartlett, Harry Mager, August Mesenbrink, J. Domke, L. G. Bruder, Robert Bechstein, and George Rinke, the latter three of Mokena.
